

OFFICER ROSALIND “ROZ” CURRY

Police Officer III Rosalind S. Curry is a native of Southern California, born and raised in south Los Angeles, and the youngest of eight children raised by a single mother.

Since the age of nine years old Rosalind dreamed of becoming a Police Officer and Singer. As a twenty-four-year veteran of the Los Angeles Police Department. Roz has represented LAPD throughout the country by singing at various events, and recently at game six and seven of the 2017 World Series. One might say that Officer Roz is truly living out her childhood dreams.

Everyone throughout the Los Angeles Police Department calls her “Roz”. Roz is currently assigned to the Employee Assistance Unit. Roz is the lead Department Funeral Coordinator for the Department. A critical component of being a Funeral Coordinator is to assist Department employees who have suffered the loss of a dependent child, spouse, or domestic partner. She also works with surviving Department family members with every aspect of coping with a death, be it, in the line-of-duty or on active status. This may include a shoulder to cry on, or planning a complete funeral service.

Roz has been a member of the Department’s prestigious Honor Guard for seventeen years. This position has afforded Roz the opportunity to represent the Department at public and private events including tributes to fallen officers throughout California, Washington, D.C. and Canada.

Roz has been a member of the Department’s Peer Support Program for the past eighteen years. Being a peer support member has allowed her the opportunity to share professional and personal experiences with those in need. Throughout her tenure in public service, Roz has worked tirelessly to make a difference, not only with Department personnel and their families, but also the Los Angeles community.
